A Trip to the Pond

Rachel loves ducks. She reads books about ducks and draws pictures of them too. Her favorite thing is to feed the ducks at the pond. She goes every Saturday with her dad. She cleans the house each week to earn money for bread.

"Are you ready to go?" her dad asked. Rachel had just finished her chores. She ran outside to meet her dad in the car so he could drive her to the store. When Rachel arrived, she ran to the bread aisle. She counted her money and saw she had enough to buy two bags of bread. Rachel paid for the bread and then they left to go to the pond.

Quack! Quack! "I can hear the ducks!" Rachel said. Rachel sat on the brick wall by the pond. She opened her bags of bread. Three ducks saw her and swam up. Rachel broke up the bread in little pieces. She gave it to the ducks. They ate it all up. "I can't wait to come back again," she told her dad.
